Challenge

DialAFlight's success depends on its continued delivery of exceptional Customer Service. As a considerable proportion of its business comes from repeat customers, it is essential that their journey with the brand is as smooth as possible with limited friction experienced.

As a purely phone-based provider, DialAFlight's telephony systems are central to operations. As such, the company needed a partner that could help serve its demanding customer service requirements, as well as to help its 295+ Travel Managers work as efficiently and effectively across its four sites.

After assessing the market for a suitable provider, DialAFlight selected IPI as its partner of choice.

Solution

IPI recommended an upgrade to Avaya's IP Office solution across all four DialAFlight sites in Croydon, Manchester and Maidstone as well as at the company's headquarters in Queen Elizabeth Street, London.

The four systems have been networked together, and an intelligent voice recording solution deployed to ensure that the quality of calls is kept to the high standard demanded of DialAFlight.

Overall, the biggest demand has been to ensure that DialAFlight's phone system, as its core and only route to market, doesn't fail. As such, DialAFlight has implemented a 24 x 7 x 365 support contract with IPI.

Underlying this, IPI has implemented a dedicated MPLS network for the back office and Contact Centre, integrated into a feature rich inbound platform with non-geographic numbering to provide a full Disaster Recovery capability.
